Background and Objectives

The adoption of the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGPs) in 2011 was a milestone achievement by the international community. The first decade of implementation has seen significant progress in terms of policy level commitments to protect and respect human rights in the context of business activities. These developments have helped raise awareness and attention to the concerns of Indigenous Peoples in relation to business. Nonetheless, Indigenous Peoples continue facing gross human rights violations related to business activities in their traditional lands and territories. Moreover, new and emerging threats such as criminalization have put at risk defenders and their communities when opposing business projects in their lands and territories.

IPRI and IWGIA convened a working session with indigenous experts and support organizations to reflect upon the first decade of implementation of the UNGPs and develop recommendations for the second decade. As well as strengthening the respect and protection of the individual and collective rights of Indigenous Peoples, and their access to justice in relation to business activities.

The result of this working session in relation to the progress, gaps, challenges, and lessons learned will be presented in this side event. Members of the Working Group on Business and Human Rights will also share insights from their own stocktaking of the UNGPs first decade (UNGPs 10+) and reflect on lessons learned in relation to the UNGPs and indigenous peoples. The Working Group's stocktaking will be the basis for a "roadmap for the next decade" for States and business, to be presented later in the year. A representative from the private sector and government are invited to present their initiatives and engage in a constructive dialogue with Indigenous Peoples.
This side event aims to:

- To raise awareness on the progress, lessons learned, gaps and from the first decade of UNGPs implementation in relation to Indigenous Peoples; and

- To provide an avenue for exchange and interaction between Indigenous Peoples, members of the UN Working Group, business and States towards advancing the respect and protection of Indigenous Peoples’ rights on the ground in relation to business.
